

Mission

The purpose of Administrative Professional Council is to represent the interests of Administrative Professionals at Colorado State University. Members are dedicated to researching, discussing, and making recommendations to CSU administration on any issue that has the potential to affect the welfare of APs. Key initiatives of the APC include Commitment to Campus, contributing to discussions on University benefits, and serving on University committees. In addition, the APC hosts employee appreciation events throughout the year.

Current Members

The Administrative Professional Council is comprised of APs from 15 different areas across campus with two to three representatives from each area elected to the APC. Administrative professionals at Colorado State support research, teaching, outreach, management, program direction, and leadership.

Who are Administrative Professionals?

Most AP positions fall into the following standard job categories:

- President, vice presidents, provost, vice provosts, deans and associate deans
- Research associates and scientists
- Information technology professionals
- Administrative directors and managers
- Coordinators
- Student service specialists
- Extension educators and specialists
- Foresters and other natural resource managers

Becoming Involved

The APC seeks energetic, passionate people to join the council. APC meets monthly and any AP with at least half-time appointment is eligible to serve.

Benefits of being on APC include:

- Networking with peers
- Developing leadership skills
- Taking part in decisions on issues related to you, your peers, and CSU
- Making new friends

If you're interested in APC or have questions, please find your area representative at www.ap.colostate.edu.

Council member elections are held in the spring for terms beginning on July 1, and occasionally other vacancies are filled at different times of the year.

“The Administrative Professional Council is critical to the success of Colorado State University, helping CSU uphold its commitment to be an outstanding workplace that attracts and retains some of the most accomplished professionals in the country. The APC ensures that our administrative professionals have a strong, well-informed voice in University governance, budgeting, and planning.”

– Dr. Tony Frank, President,
Colorado State University

“Administrative Professionals play an important role on campus, supporting our academic, research and outreach mission. The Administrative Professional Council supports those Administrative Professionals, builds connections across campus, facilitates collaboration and integrates ideas that benefit the university.”
