“Since my arrival, Lari has been outstanding to work with as we move forward with numerous changes to the department. In assessing our philosophies, processes, and approaches, Lari has been open to new ideas, respective of traditions, and an excellent collaborator.”

“It is very apparent for anyone working with Kristi Bohlender that she loves Colorado State University whole-heartedly. She continues to improve Colorado State daily and is invested in making it better with every effort she has. Not only is she an invaluable asset to the university, but she is invaluable to those around her. Her energy is contagious.”

“She works tirelessly to encourage student success – both academic and career. Mary’s excellent skills in listening and communicating make her a great mediator and team builder. She has great energy, intellectual curiosity, and an exceptional work ethic.”

“…she helped organize an event to help connect AP’S to State Classified personnel by having them come together at an Ice Cream Social. There was a huge turnout where we were able to say thanks to some of the facilities people who clean the building and area we work in.” Her humble desire to serve those around her is one of the things that make her such a great colleague and leader. She is a tireless advocate for CSU in so many ways.
“Gaye is always positive, always open to taking on new challenges, always willing to consider change, and always an advocate for her colleagues and staff.”

“Frank motivates people to learn and grow, is supportive in all their endeavors – whether work related or personal, continuously encourages professional growth and continuing education, and always shows his appreciation for a job well done.”

“Every one of us that works for her knows that students come first in all of our decisions, in our workloads, in our processes. If it’s not working for the students, we change it.”

“Ann truly cares for our employees. She tries to do all she can to support them in their daily work and their professional goals.” As the Professional Development Coordinator for CSFS, Ann Randall has taken on not only her normal responsibilities but a multitude of others, including Human Resources. She has done this with respect, professionalism, and confidentiality. Ann truly cares for the agency and the employees and tries to do all she can to support them in their daily work and professional goals.
“During her many years of distinguished service to the University, Becky has selflessly offered her expertise, guidance, and assistance to those around her, even at the expense of extending her already full workload.”

“Her calming demeanor has helped a staff that has needed to adjust to rapid change, progress by keeping us unified as acting as the “glue” of our group. She will take on additional duties to spare the stress level of others around her and will offer additional help (both tangible and emotional) even if she is at capacity.”

“She has been great over the past several years at sending us – that is those of us in Extension campus and off – updates on decisions and issues that affect us and/or that we may be interested in learning about.” As we get updates from Ruth, it makes me and hopefully others around the state feel more connected.

“He has worked tirelessly, for example, with the Research Integrity & Compliance Office staff to help design a mechanism to improve the access to and organization of research compliance data. APs that he works with have commented that he is always quick to answer “help-desk” emails, and provides accurate and helpful responses.”
“As an advisor, Elizabeth takes to heart the idea of being a solid resource for students and is always involved in meeting people for offices around campus and utilizing that knowledge to provide referrals or resources to help students succeed.”

“With limited resources and the cliché of doing more with less, Judy is a tireless trooper that exemplifies what it means to be creative with resources and effectively work in collaboration around campus.”
